The Welcoming Project

April 24, 2014

Kevin Miller has been practicing law for 28 years. He completed his undergraduate education at The University of Oklahoma, and graduated in 1982 with a degree in Political Science. He then went on to law school at the OCU School of Law and graduated with his JD in 1985. His focus within the field of law is in the areas of estate planning, wills, and trusts. He has even gone a step further and extended his focus to fitting the needs of the LGBT community within these fields as well. He understands that the needs for each individual couple whether, LGBT or not, are different and takes the time to get to know his clients and find out exactly what they need so he can focus on specific issues and really serve his clients to the best of his ability.

Although he was always involved, he really started to focus on the issues within the LGBT community in 2004. He felt that it was unfair that members of this community were not able to achieve the same securities as those who have access to marriage or other benefits of the sort. He teamed up with a local law firm who had an extra office available in their building and started providing his own services within their building as a way to provide a safe, set, professional, and welcoming environment for anyone needing his help.

Kevin Miller has focused his whole career on equality in every area. He has been a member of the Diversity Business Association since day one and even attends the monthly meetings. He is also works with Woven and travels around to speak at events on a regular basis.

I asked him about his schedule so far this month within these events and he just within the first three months of the year he has done so much. In January he attended a Lunch and Learn event at the Oklahoma Judicial Center which focused on LGBT legal, tax, and finance strategies. In February he spoke with the Central Oklahoma Prime Timers, which is a local chapter of Prime Timers World Wide. Prime Timers focuses more on the issues within the older group of gay and bisexual men. Also, in March he co-hosted/co-sponsored an event at the Chi Gallery focusing on the Oklahoma Marriage Equality Lawsuit. They were visited by the couples who are involved within this case. So these examples alone, plus the services he provides as well shows just how dedicated he is to the LGBT community.

I wanted to close out with a quote from Kevin's website. It is a quote about his frame of mind with practicing law. It reads, "I believe that people should be treated with decency, dignity, and respect. I believe in equality and justice for everyone. Equality is fundamental and necessary if we are to have a just society." This quote speaks worlds to me and really hits home about what The Welcoming Project stands for. This is the basic principle we as society need to move forward with. Kevin Miller sheds hope for me that society can be supportive and welcoming to everyone.
